

The Cyprus Project Management Society (CPMS) is a non-profit organization formally established in February 2008. As of September 2008, the CPMS is a member of the International Project Management Association – IPMA (www.ipma.ch), a prestigious international project management organization with its own standards, research, certifications and publications.

The CPMS will be officially representing the IPMA in Cyprus and will be promoting locally its activities, standards and techniques, research and its world leading professional project management certification.

The vision of the CPMS is to bring benefits to organizations, businesses, professionals and the society in general, through the establishment of a professional project management culture.

The Society's primary objectives are:

- to introduce and promote international project management standards,
- to help institutionalize and advance the project management profession in Cyprus,
- to enable and support its members to obtain international project management and other relevant certifications,
- to assist organisations in establishing a project management culture,
- to disseminate and promote project management knowledge and expertise,
- to participate and contribute to research conducted in the area of project management
- to promote networking between professionals in Cyprus and abroad.

The CPMS is governed by a five member Board of Directors and membership is open to all professionals who meet the requirements defined in the Society's Articles of Association, related primarily to a candidate's academic background and professional experience.

For more information, visit the Society's website <http://www.cpms.org.cy/> or contact the CPMS directly at info@cpms.org.cy or by phone at + 357 7000 3642.